Let’s start by understanding the uncommon names found in the image. The image contains a letter of reference for a doctoral dissertation fellowship from the Humanities Center at Wayne State University. The document is structured with clear sections and guidelines, and it includes a place for the applicant's information, the referee's details, and the signature. The letter provides guidelines for the referee to assess the applicant's work, focusing on criteria like the significance of the dissertation topic, the cogency of the project proposal, the extent of research completed, and the quality of the applicant's scholarship and potential as a teacher. The document concludes with an address to forward the letter to the chair of the Advisory Board of the Humanities Center.
